Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) leaders have organized a plan for sending young men, age 17 to 25, for Communist administrative training at various schools in northern Tonkin and the China frontier area. These trainees are all chosen from among the poorer class. Since 1951, 70 young men from Don Luong District, Nghe An Province, have been sent for such training. Following their selection for training, these youths have no further contact with their families.
